SLAYER CLAIMS THAT MURDER WAS JUSTIFIED

Waimea Tragedy Was an Outcome of Taunts

CLAIMS THAT VICTIM MAKE FIRST ATTACKED

Pea Battered on Door With Stone and Called Kahoolawe to Come Out and Be Killed—Footprints Sawed Out of a Board.

(Special to the Bulletin.)
Hilo, Dec. 2.—The Hilo Tribune of Tuesday, Dec. 7, will contain the following:

Provocation and self-defense. These are the reasons which Kahoolawe, the murderer of Pea, gives for his act.

Kahoolawe is an old friend of Sheriff Pua, the two having lived together for fifteen years at Waimea and in other places, and when the Sheriff saw Kahoolawe after the murder the prisoner told him the full details of the desperate affair.

Kahoolawe said, according to the Sheriff, that he killed Pea because of great provocation and because he was himself attacked first by the man he slew. He said that on his return from Waimea to Mauna on that fateful Thanksgiving evening, Pea and the Korean, who was the only eye-witness to the crime, began to taunt him and call him all manner of vile names. These two men were in the Korean's room, which was right next to Kahoolawe's, and after Kahoolawe had retired to his room they called him names through the partition. Afterwards they came to Kahoolawe's door and battered it with a stone, calling at the same time that they intended to kill him. On hearing his Kahoolawe armed himself with his razor.

According to Kahoolawe's story, as told by Sheriff Pua, the two men finally managed to break the door partly in, and they threw something at Kahoolawe which struck him on the back of the neck, dazing him for a moment. As soon as he recovered his senses, Kahoolawe made a rush for Pea. The Korean ran away.

Kahoolawe slashed Pea across the abdomen with his razor, and Pea ran. Kahoolawe followed and slashed him down the back as he ran. Pea fell on a small platform near the fence, and here Kahoolawe fell over him, slashing and cutting the man under him, finally cutting his throat.

The Sheriff during his stay at Mauna secured a rag covered with blood, which Kahoolawe used for wiping his razor after he had killed Pea. The rag was found in the murderer's room and was identified by him. The Sheriff also caused a couple of Kahoolawe's footprints, which covered a board with gory marks, to be sawed out, and these are now in the possession of the police.

Among the other things which the Sheriff secured belonging to Kahoolawe was a small note book, in which he kept a record of his dreams. The text is in Hawaiian, neatly written, and carefully dating the dreams in the order in which they occurred, but without commenting on them in any way.

One item, for instance, is as follows:

"June 30, 1909—I saw a lot of women and they were saying that what I had written them concerning their health had been received by them."

In another dream which is thus described, Kahoolawe tells how he saw a long ship from America. It had many flags, and a small girl came and took him by the hand and led him on board.

Still another dream, which is quite ghastly in its significance, is as follows:

June 28, 1909—I saw Sam K. Pua, Sheriff of the County of Hawaii, and he gave me a document on which some writing had been made, but I could not make out the writing. I held the document in my hand."

This, at least, is a dream which came true.

The book further contains a mass of biblical quotations, hulas, meles and other such items.
